SEMINAR GOALS

- Examine eating disordered behaviors among adult Jewish women.
- Review a new screening questionnaire.
- Expand awareness of Jewish observances and the connection to body image.
- Create innovative strategies for blending Jewish rituals and traditions into treatment.
- Examine strategies to reduce body shaming, negative self-talk and the quest for perfection.
- Explore inner wisdom practices sensitive to all Jewish clients.

AGENDA

7:30 AM – 8:00 AM REGISTRATION AND BREAKFAST

8:00 AM – 8:15 AM The Altar of Thinness

Much as the Israelites paid homage to the Golden Calf, today we worship at another altar – the altar of thinness – honoring a false God created from a culture that has lost its way, wandering as if still in the desert, searching for what will make us complete. The altar of thinness, built on the popular cultural network of images, rituals, myths, beliefs and moral codes, promises women “salvation” in the form of a thinner body. Through a slide show based on Torah portions and quotes from Jewish leaders, attendees will learn how the wisdom of our sages can be as vital in today’s world as in earlier times.

8:15 AM – 9:30 AM Overview of Eating Problems in the Jewish Community

Our understanding of serious eating problems begins with a portrait of the American Jewish Community and is expanded with findings from a large study of adult Jewish women.

Important treatment-relevant issues include:

- Frequency and complexity of binge eating behaviors;
- Binge eating according to religious observance: Orthodox, Traditional, Secular;
- The impact of self-criticism on eating disorder severity;
- Treatment implications of findings for Jewish clients across the religious spectrum.

9:30 AM – 10:15 AM Exploring Jewish Observances and their Clinical Implications

This session expands an awareness of Jewish themes and their connections to eating disorders. In addition to case vignettes that highlight Sabbath observances, pressures to marry, use of birth control and fasting practices, traditions such as the Passover Seder will be examined.

10:15 AM – 11:00 AM Blending Rituals and Traditions into Treatment Processes

An abundance of rituals and traditions within Judaism have the potential to enhance eating disorder prevention and treatment interventions. Professionals will have the opportunity to brainstorm ways to develop time-honored practices into innovative take home strategies.

11:00 AM – 11:15 AM BREAK

11:15 AM – 12:15 PM Bringing the Body into Body Image

For women of all ages, body dissatisfaction has become a way of life. Yet, the pursuit of physical perfection can never take the place of self-respect, self-love and self-compassion. This session will explore the defining components of body image treatment and how to help Jewish clients break the cycle of shame and negative self-talk. Strategies for healing will be taught through experiential activities, demonstration exercises and learning to identify the body's language.

12:15 PM – 1:15 PM Exploring Inner Wisdom Practices

During this experiential session, inner wisdom practices appropriate for integrating into traditional treatment approaches are explored. Participants will be introduced to a variety of emerging and innovative practices designed to increase their clients' resilience and strengthen their recovery.
